Community Development in East Africa!

This is the third UCCS class in collaboration with the non-profit organization, Global Livingston Institute (GLI). Since 2009, GLI has built reciprocal and strategic partnerships communities in Uganda and Rwanda using the listen, think, act framework to immerse students in the complexity of locally-driven international development. This is a unique opportunity for students to:

- Engage with grassroots community activists, government leaders, entrepreneurs, professors, and fellow students in urban and rural settings in Africa.
- Learn how communities in Uganda and Rwanda mobilize local resources and global networks to chart new development paths.
- Apply interdisciplinary approaches to real-world challenges
- Students selected are eligible to apply for limited travel scholarships.
